

cannot be found.

May 11 (Friday) -- With wiretap records still missing, Judge Byrne dismisses the Ellsberg Russo indictment and declares a mistrial, not on the wiretap grounds alone but citing a prolonged pattern of prosecutorial and executive misconduct "which offends a sense of justice": 2:05PM L.A. time

(2) About 1 hour later, Ruckelshaus announces that the missing wiretap records of FBI wiretaps between 1969 and 1971 (not the White House taps of 1971-1972 described by the Washington Post article of May 3rd) have been located in the White House safe of John Ehrlichman.